

Members of the Japanese Red Cross Society

Members of the Japanese Red Cross Society (JRCS) endorse its humanitarian activities and contribute a prescribed amount (more than 2,000 JPY) of funding each year. Any individual or corporation may become a member. Members are the driving force of the Red Cross' projects and foundation of the Society; the JRCS hopes to welcome as many members as possible.

All members have the following rights.

- To vote to elect members of the Board of Representatives and executive officers of the JRCS and to be as candidates for these posts' election.

(However, corporate members do not possess the right to hold posts.)

- To receive annual activity and financial reports concerning the JRCS.

(Public notices can be substituted for these reports.)

- Through members of the Board of Representatives elected in their locale, to express opinions regarding the management of the JRCS' programs.